However, one day, Plater met a woman named Linda. Linda was a social worker who worked with homeless people, and she saw something in Plater that she couldn't ignore.

Linda helped Plater get into a drug and alcohol treatment program, and she provided him with the support and encouragement he needed to turn his life around. With Linda's help, Plater was able to get clean and sober, and he began to rebuild his life.

Finding Purpose

After completing treatment, Plater decided to dedicate his life to helping others who were struggling with homelessness. He founded the Plater Group, a non-profit organization that provides housing, job training, and other services to homeless people.
