Co-authored by astronautics expert Bill Barry and aviation writer Francis French, "Splashdown" meticulously documents the heroic efforts of the U.S. Navy and NASA in retrieving astronauts from the ocean after their missions. Drawing upon exclusive interviews with key participants, the book provides a thrilling narrative that captivates readers from start to finish.

Delving into the Depths: The Navy's Role in Space Exploration

The book sheds light on the extraordinary role played by the Navy in supporting space exploration. From the recovery of Alan Shepard's Freedom 7 capsule in 1961 to the final return of the Apollo 17 astronauts in 1972, the Navy's expertise and unwavering commitment were instrumental in ensuring the safe return of these American heroes.

Beyond the Capsules: The Human Side of Recovery Operations

"Splashdown" goes beyond technical details to explore the human element of recovery operations. The authors share fascinating stories of the brave men and women involved, their challenges, triumphs, and the camaraderie that bound them together. Readers will gain a deep appreciation for the sacrifices and dedication of these unsung heroes.

A Treasure Trove of Rare Photographs and Artifacts

Enriching the narrative are hundreds of rare photographs, many of which have never been published before. These vivid images offer a glimpse into the behind-the-scenes world of recovery operations and bring history to life. Additionally, the book features exclusive access to NASA and Navy archives, providing a wealth of artifacts and documents that further authenticate the gripping story.

A Must-Read for Space Enthusiasts and History Buffs Alike

"Splashdown" is a must-read for anyone fascinated by space exploration, history, or the human spirit. It combines in-depth research, thrilling storytelling, and stunning visuals to create a captivating account of one of the most important aspects of the space race. The book will inspire awe, respect, and a renewed appreciation for the extraordinary partnership between NASA and the Navy.
